After discussing divorce in our October seminar, we will hear from Kevin Bress, a member of the law firm Hodes, Pessin & Katz, about issuing facing couples planning to re-marry.

Legal and financial issues abound for those contemplating a second round of marriage vows. Financial Planners are often in the best position to sound the alert as to financial, estate and elder law issues for those re-marrying. Most folks mistakenly think that a pre-nuptial agreement will resolve all the issues when forming a blended family.

Kevin Bress has been practicing in the estate planning field since graduating law school and has been a principal member of Hodes, Pessin & Katz, P.A. since 1993. His broad-based background serves his clients well when drafting wills, administering estates and giving elder law planning advice. He has headed his firm's Estate and Elder Law departments over the years and represents clients throughout Maryland.
